The Chair-lift is one of the most interesting attractions in the hills of Buda, travelling between Zugliget and the János Hill. On its way down, the passenger can truly admire the panorama of Budapest while literally feeling like descending from the hill into the city. The upper section of the track hangs through the forests of the steep hillside, the lower travels above the streets and gardens of the Zugliget Mansion Quarter. The complete length of the track is 1,04 km, the height difference between top and bottom is 262 m, its speed of 4 km/h is slower than the average of Budapest's escalators.

The light-railway, called kids railway is the railway #7 of Budapest, one of the oldest tracks in the whole city. It certainly is one of the most impressive things to see in the II. and XII. districts of the city. The complete railway is operated by children, under the supervision of some adult employees of course. Since its construction until the political change of 1990, it was called the pioneer rail, in relation to the era's focus on children's education through labor. The length of the track is 11,2 km with a 235 m height difference between the final stops.
